“IGNORANCE IS BLISS”

Dear Editor:

I have had it with all your neighborhood newsy stuff. I mean, really. Who cares about the crap you write about anyway?

Proposed office buildings in residential neighborhoods? BORING. Paving the acequias and another bridge over Montano? BIG YAWN. Cell towers along the ditch banks? ANOTHER LOSER SNOOZER. But the final straw has got to be your latest expose on illegal land uses along Rio Grande Boulevard, “A Neighborhood Held Hostage”.

Here you go again with another local interest story designed to get area residents all informed and worked up over nothing. So what if properties zoned residential are used illegally for commercial purposes and attract an unsavory crowd into the neighborhood? It’s obvious that you are just a bunch of liberal do-gooders railing against small business and the great American spirit! And so what if children walking to and from school are subjected to public drinking and urination? Isn’t it best that they are exposed to it now, while they’re still in their formative years and have lots of time to recover? And what is the big deal about City and County Zoning officials unable to enforce your precious zoning regulations? Apparently you and your tree-hugging buddies believe that law-abiding area homeowners are somehow entitled to the full protection of the law. Balderdash and bananas! Absentee landowners have feelings, too!

It’s clear that you guys need to get over yourselves and all your touchy-feely quality of life issues. No one needs to know what is going on along the Rio Grande Corridor. All we need to do while racing up and down the Boulevard is just close our eyes and think happy thoughts. Politicians and developers will always do the right thing. Really. An ignorant populace is a happy populace.
